

Wanted: Project leader for Tankstation resilience research

10 hours a week

From agreed start date until February 2024

Tankstation Cultureel Vulpunt recently received a subsidy from the municipality of Enschede to research how to strengthen the resilience of Tankstation as a cultural space in the city. Using these resources, we are conducting thorough research to explore ways in which we can safeguard the continued presence of Tankstation for our community in Enschede. We are looking to hire someone who would be excited to take on this challenge with us by researching specific aspects of Tankstation's operations.

The topics we expect you to research include our organizational structure, property management, subsidies, financial planning, and possibilities for collaborating with other cultural organizations. Most of these topics would entail obtaining third party, professional advice. You would be supported in your research by Tankstation's board, director, and crew. The research will also be aided by update meetings with the municipality.

The final result of your job as a project leader will be a structured report that summarizes the findings on each of the themes listed above. We would ask you to conclude your research by providing your recommendations on how Tankstation could move forward, given the knowledge you've acquired throughout the research project.

The ideal candidate for this role has a good understanding of the Dutch culture sector. Ideally, they would also have previous experience working with cultural organizations. Any experience in cultural management or public administration would be highly appreciated. However, we encourage you to apply regardless of your level of experience. Our Tankstation community is eager to learn along with you and we are happy to provide mentorship to the best of our abilities. What you will definitely need for this job is a curious mindset and to enjoy reaching out and talking to people.

To submit your application, please send a short motivation to board@tankstationenschede.nl. We will follow up with you to let you know if we'd like to schedule an interview. Feel free to reach out with questions as well.
